

Unite with the families of Shu'fat!

Shu'fat refugee camp, just north of the Old City of Jerusalem, is home to 24,000 Palestinians. At least half of them are children.

The struggle to survive

Living in dangerously overcrowded conditions with poor access to municipal services residents suffer from frequent water and electricity shortages. Unemployment is high.

The camp is hemmed in on all sides by the 'separation wall' and illegal Israeli settlements, with movement in and out being strictly controlled by the Israeli authorities. Teargas, skunk spray and plastic-coated metal bullets are regularly used against the inhabitants.

Community Action

The residents of Shu'fat value education highly and community-based organisations run all kinds of social, educational and health projects. These include vocational training for young people and the disabled and summer camps for the children.

Traditional Palestinian cuisine and handicrafts are passed on to the next generation.
